GAUNTLET IS THROWN DOWN BY CARRANZA

Expeditionary Force Will Be Hosted in All But Northern Movement—Trevino Informs Pershing of Latest Stand Taken by First Chief.

Chihuahua City, Mex., June 16—Gen. Jicotino Trevino, commanding the Carranza army of the North, today advised Gen. J. J. Pershing, American expeditionary commander, that any movement of American troops from their present lines to the south, east or west, would be considered a hostile act and signal to commence warfare. Gen. Trevino acted upon specific instructions from Carranza.

Pershing Able to Protest His Column, Say Officers.

El Paso, Texas, June 16—Despatched from Chihuahua City that Gen. Trevino had notified Gen. Pershing that any movement of his command other than in a northerly direction would be construed as a hostile act, aroused no apprehension among army officials here tonight. It was asserted that the expeditionary command is amply prepared to care for itself in any eventuality.

A compact line of communication extending from the border at Columbus, N. M., to Namilqupa, about 280 miles south, has been drawn during the last few weeks. Large quantities of foods, forage, ammunition and other supplies have been concentrated at the field headquarters at Namilqupa and at the field bases of El Valle and Colonia Wublan. It was pointed out also that beyond occasional sorties after marauding bandits, the American troops in Mexico have been inactive for several weeks.

Militia of Every State in the Union Called Out for Border Patrol Duty

Washington, D. C., June 18—Virtually the entire mobile strength of the national guard of all states and the District of Columbia were ordered mustered into the Federal service to-night by President Wilson. About 100,000 men are ready to respond to the call. They will be mobilized immediately for such service on the Mexican border as may later be assigned to them. General Frederic Funston, commanding the border forces, will designate the time and place for movements of guardsmen to the international line as the occasion shall require.

In commanding the orders Secretary Baker said the state forces would be employed only to guard the border and that no additional troop movements into Mexico were contemplated except in pursuit of raiders.

Simultaneously with the national guard, Gen. Daniels of the navy Department ordered additional war vessels to Mexican waters on both coasts to safeguard American lives.

At the War and Navy State Departments it was stated that no new advices as to the situation in Mexico had come to precipitate the new orders.

Mobilization of the national guardmen to support General Funston's line will pave the way for releasing some 30,000 regulars for immediate service in Mexico in the event of open hostilities with the Carranza government. The guardmen themselves could not be used beyond the line without authority of Congress and until they had volunteered for that duty as they are called out under the old militia law. The new law, which would make them available for duty under the Federal government, goes into effect July 1.

About 50,000 Men on Border

The entire mobile regular army in the United States, several provisional regiments of regular coast artillery serving as infantry and the National Guard of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, now are on the border or in Mexico. Definite figures have never been made public but it is understood that General Funston has about 40,000 regulars and probably 5,000 or more guardsmen, of whom 10,000 regulars are with General Peralta or scattered along his line of communication from Namilqupa, Mexico to Columbus, New Mexico.

Telegrams calling for the militia were sent to the Governors of all states except the three whose guardmen already have been mustered in after an all day conference at the War Department, attended by Secretary Baker, Major General Scott, chief of staff, Major General Bliss, chief of the mobile army, and Brigadier General Mills, chief of the militia division of the general staff. Brigadier General McCombs, president of the Army War College, also was consulted. Since Mr. Baker did not find it necessary to confer again with President Wilson after his late visit to the White House last night, it was apparent the decision to bring out the militia was reached there.

The new order will put at the disposal of General Funston two major generals and twenty-one brigadier generals of militia with their complete infantry commands.

Wires Are Cut

Nogales, Ariz., June 18—All telephone and telegraph wires leading from the American to the Mexican side of the border have been cut in Sonora. Americans are being brought to this border in automobiles from Nacozari, where an anti-American demonstration occurred today. Carranza authorities previously had caused a train for the refugees.

Belle of Maysville

The most wonderful whisky that ever drove the skeleton from a feast or painted landscapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of wheat and corn. In it you will find the sunshine and the shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields; the breath of June; the curl of the lark; the dews of night; the wealth of summer; and Autumn's rich content—all golden with impregnated light.

Drink it, and you will hear the voices of men and maidens singing the "Harvest Home" mingled with the laughter of children. Drink it, and you will feel within your blood the starlit dawns, the dreamy, tawny dusks of many perfect days. For many years this liquid joy has been confined within the happy staves of oak, longing to touch the lips of man.

WAR AND THE MAN

(By M. Collingby.)

One wonders at times what will be the result of this war on the characters of the men who have gone through it.

No end of predictions are being concocted on the general changes in social and economic conditions that will occur when the war is over. But what of the far more interesting and human study—the change in the men themselves? No man can go through the struggle and come out the same. Some are etched more deeply than others, naturally; some were professional soldiers before, and to them the game, though infinitely more terrible than their previous experiences, was not quite new. But what of all the others—the lawyers, the doctors, the artists, the clerks, the writers, the stockbrokers, all of them taken suddenly from the placid, everyday sedentary life and pitchforked into the Great Adventure?

Will it mangle them mauler or simply toughen? Will they be able to settle down to the deadening monotony of the old routine, the same old train in the morning, the same stuffy office, the conventional amusements, the same train back home? One has read so much—one has understood so little.

Here is a conversation that shows the contrast of normal, ordinary life in England against war life in France. Passing Vane, the stockbroker's, house the other evening I suddenly heard a hall:

"Come in and have a gargle. I've just got back on short leave."

"Good," I answered. "Mrs. Vane must be pleased." We strode up the drive, and in through the door. "You're looking very fit, old man. Flanders seems to suit you."

"My dear fellow, it does. It's the goods I never knew what living was before. The thought of that cursed office makes me tired—and—and once—I shrugged his shoulders—"it filled my life. Say when."

"Cheer oh!" We clinked glasses. "I thought you were taking a commission."

"I am—very shortly. The Colonel has recommended me for one, and I gather the powers that be approve. But in a way I'm sorry, you know. I've got a great pal in my section—who kept a whale stall down in Whitechapel. I assure you, my dear chap, that fellow spins a yarn better than any society recontre I've ever met. Garnished a little, a trifle full-bodied and spicy—but still, quo voullez-vous?"

He was looking reminiscently into the fire from the depths of an armchair and pulling luxuriously at his pipe. Suddenly he gave a short laugh.

"To show you the type of fellow he is. About a week ago we were up in the trenches—bored stiff, and yet happy in a way, you know, when Master Boche started to register—that is, to find out the exact range of our bit of Mother Earth by dropping shells there. I suppose it was a new battery or something, but they were using crumps, not shrapnel; I mean, it was a howitzer firing stuff that exploded on impact, not a field gun firing shrapnel that exploded in the air. They weren't very big, but they were very close—and they got closer. You hear a nasty droning noise, then there's the toll of an explosion—a great column of blackish yellow smoke rises, and the bits ping through the air overhead. Well, he got a bracket; by that I mean the first one was 50 yards short of the trench and the second was a hundred yards over. Then he started to come back—always in the same line; and the line passed straight through our bit of the trench.

"Ere! What yer doing, you perisher? Sargin, go and stop 'em. Tell 'em I've been appointed purveyor of wrinkles to the Royal 'Ouse of the 'Un Emperor.'

"Our friend of the whale stall was surveying the scene with intense disfavor. A great mass of smoke belched up from the ground 20 yards away and he ducked instinctively. Then we waited—15 seconds, about, was the interval between shots. The men were a bit white about the gills, and—well, the feeling in the pit of my tummy was what is known as wobbly. Then it came and we cowered. There was a roar like nothing on earth—the back of the trench collapsed and the whole lot of us were buried. If the shell had been five yards short it would have burst in the trench and my whale friend would have whelked no mora."

Vane replenished his drink and laughed. "We emerged plucking mud from our mouths and cursed. The man apparently was satisfied and stopped. The only person who wasn't satisfied was the purveyor of wrinkles to the Royal 'Ouse.' He hooted through the day, but toward the evening he became more cheerful.

"Look 'ere," he said to me, "ave you ever killed a 'Un?"

"I think I did once," I said, "fat man with a nasty face."

"Oh, you 'ave, 'ave you? Well, what about killing one tonight? If they think I'm going to stand that sort of thing they're——wrong! The language was the language of Whitechapel, but the sentiments were the sentiments of even the most rabid purist of speech.

"To cut a long story short, we went. We warned 'em in the trench and we scrambled over the parapet—out into No Man's Land. And we were very lucky.

"We ran into three of 'em, creeping about half way between the trenches. My fish friend spotted them first and checked horribly. Gad, man!" Vane's pipe was out and he was glaring up at me. "I never knew what life was till that moment. He cracked the skull of one with the butt of his rifle, and I got my bayonet into another. To think of it—alone in the blackness of the night; to feel the steel go in, to hear the gutteral curse of fear—to know that, man to man, one had beaten them. Life—great heavens—it was perfect, ultra hills."

Then came the interruption. "Dear," said a voice at the door, "the children are in bed. Will you go up and say good-night?"

For a moment there was absolute silence in the room. And then Vane laughed shortly, a little harshly. "Of course, dear, I'll go at once." He rose and finished his drink. "I'm afraid I've been drinking a lot of hot air, old boy."

"Not a bit," I answered; "you've interested me enormously."

He had—but the contrast had interested me still more. What is going to be the result?

I GIVE ROOSEVELT BY FINANCIAL LEADERS FOR REFUSING NOMINATION—HENRY P. DAVIDSON SAYS UNLIKELY PARTY SHOULD REJECT WILSON.

New York, June 17.—Henry P. Davidson in a paragraph characteristically concise compactly what appears to be the prevailing view in the financial district of the presidential outlook, excepting that it is not the view of those who favor the re-election of President Wilson. Mr. Davidson believes that thorough co-operation is to be established between the Republican and Progressive parties, and that if it is established it will be likely to defeat President Wilson in the November election. Mr. Davidson also said a word or two of Colouel Roosevelt, asserting that the latter's action means much not only to the United States but to the world at large. It reveals patriotism of the highest quality.

While, of course, the overwhelming financial and commercial interest occasioned by the European war and the great wave of prosperity which now covers the entire United States compels absorbing interest among the leaders in the financial district, nevertheless they do turn aside for a moment or two to speak of presidential politics.

There appears to have been some change of political opinion in the financial district since the campaign of 1912. Many of the leaders at that time favored the election of Governor Woodrow Wilson for President. The friction which caused cleavage in the Republican party four years ago split the Republicans of the financial district. Something like sympathy prevailed there among them, partly because they regarded it as sure as anything in politics would be that Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, would be chosen President of the United States.

Although there does not appear now to be quite as visible a sentiment in favor of President Wilson's election as prevailed four years ago, nevertheless mention is always made of his eminent service in persuading Congress to enact legislation which created our modernized banking system and the Federal Reserve Board.

FEDERAL RESERVE HELPED.

The leaders in international financing have often said that the fortunate establishment of the Federal Reserve Board—and by a remarkable coincidence a few weeks after the beginning of the European war—has done more than any other influence to enable American financiers and the banking world of the United States to meet successfully the new and absolutely original problem which the war developed.

For a year and a half a change has been observed in the attitude of many of the leaders in the financial district toward Colonel Roosevelt. It was strikingly manifested when Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, which is the banking representative of the Standard Oil Company, spoke for publication a few days ago in favor of the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt by the Republicans?

If Colonel Roosevelt should hear, as the undoubtedly will, what the leaders in the financial district are saying about what they call his patriotic action last week, these comments should, perhaps compensate to some extent for whatever disappointment he may have had, if any, in the results at Chicago.

"Look 'ere," he said to me, "ave you ever killed a 'Un?"

"I think I did once," I said, "fat man with a nasty face."

"Oh, you 'ave, 'ave you? Well, there was, however, considerable doubt until the day of the nomination whether or not Justice Hughes would accept the nomination. His professional brothers in New York knew that his place upon the bench of the Supreme Court was most satisfactory to him—congenial to his temperamental as well as to his intellectual qualities.

CLEAR THINKER.

One of the remarks commonly made when Mr. Hughes's mental capacities are under discussion is that he possesses an unusual power for clear thinking as well as a remarkable gift for expressing even abstruse thoughts in concise, perfectly clear and very forcible English speech. There has been no President, excepting Lincoln, whose mental capacities surpass or even equal those of Mr. Hughes in this respect.

The late John Clinton Gray, who was for many years Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals at Albany, said not the time of Governor Hughes's appointment by President Taft as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court at Washington that no lawyer had ever argued before the Court of Appeals more effectively than Governor Hughes when he was in active practice. His legal expositions were marvels of clearness and might be studied as good examples of lucid expression of abstract thought. It seemed, however, to Justice Gray that if Hughes had any weakness, intellectually or professionally, it was his over-elaboration of minor points at issue, so that in his arguments these appeared to be of as great consequence as the one which seemed to the Justices to be the single issue of importance.

There are many business men in the United States who can repeat from memory the substance of the speech delivered by Governor Hughes at Youngstown, Ohio, at the beginning of the presidential campaign of 1908. That speech is still regarded as the best exposition of the proper relation which should be maintained on the one hand between business and the public and on the other hand between the public and business.

In his career Mr. Hughes has been singularly fortunate. Fortuitous circumstances for which he was not responsible several times aided him. He probably would still be practicing law in New York had he not been appointed counsel for the Legislative Committee which was authorized to investigate the life insurance companies of New York City. He would not have been appointed had another than he accepted the offer first made by the committee. This offer was first made to James M. Beck, who was compelled to decline it because he was at the time acting as private or personal counsel to the President of one of the life insurance companies.

DANGERS OF MOST FLY POISONS.

In Farm and Fireside is an article telling of the dangers to human health in many fly poisons.

Most of them contain arsenic—a deadly and rapid poison. In view of the extent to which such poison is kept in saucers about many houses during dry time, let us bear in mind that the past two years seventy-two cases are on record of children being poisoned by playfully drinking the contents of saucers set out for flies.

"Some of the children died, but most of them, having prompt medical treatment, recovered. Michigan now has a law regulating the sale of fly poisons. But a matter of this kind is often successfully coped with if the attention of intelligent people is simply called to the danger. We are not condemning fly poisons, but simply urge care in keeping them out of the reach of youngsters."

FEDERAL RESERVE HELPED.

The leaders in international financing have often said that the fortunate establishment of the Federal Reserve Board—and by a remarkable coincidence a few weeks after the beginning of the European war—has done more than any other influence to enable American financiers and the banking world of the United States to meet successfully the new and absolutely original problem which the war developed.

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

Read How Mrs. Goodling got Relief and Strength.

YORK, PA.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I could not sit without a pillow under me. I had the doctor every few days but since I have taken the Compound I don't have to send for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief." —Mrs. CATHARINE GOODLING, 138 E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.

"THE TANGLED WEB"

Marriage stripped of romance is really only a civil contract. Unlike other civil contracts it does not end when one party violates it or when it is brought about by fraud. Redress can be secured only by a Court action.
The non-loyal view of marriage is vividly presented in "The Tangled Web," one of the tremendously startling "Who's Guilty?" to be shown at the Pastime today. Heinie and Louie in a reel of fun. A Pathé scene travel-

BIG FEATURE AT THE GEM TODAY

does some extraordinary work in the role of Ruth McAllister, a girl ne-

MAYSVILLE LOST TWO SUNDAY

Huntington, W. Va., June 18---First baseman Gibson, of the Huntingtons lifted the ball over the right field fence here today in the fifteenth inning of the first game with Maysville, the Huntingtons losing a pitched battle 4 to 3.
Lawrence, for Huntington, had two bad innings, while the locals succeeded in bunching their hits in four separate rounds off French. The second game was also won by the locals 1 to 0. It was also a pitching duel between Smith for the locals and Mc-Graynor for Maysville. Today's contests were the fastest seen on the local lot this year. Score:

GOOD INTENTION NO. 1

Intentions never made any one rich. You opened an account here some time ago—didn't you? You are one of our depositors. Perhaps you live right here in town. Perhaps you are a depositor living at some one of the Post Offices from which we receive deposits. Then you stopped. You intended to keep it up—you intend to do so in the future. If you are going to pin your faith on that word INTEND you will live a life that will have nothing to show for it at the end —except bitter regrets. It is not yet too late to blot that word INTEND from the Dictionary of your Life and to write over it the word NOW.
